

9-12-2007

A Small Unassuming Man Walked up to Me, Shook My Hand and Told Me, “I Really Enjoyed Your Paper”

David R. Dickens Jr.

University of Nevada, Las Vegas, david.dickens@unlv.edu

Follow this and additional works at: https://digitalscholarship.unlv.edu/goffman_archives

Part of the Politics and Social Change Commons, and the Social Psychology and Interaction Commons

Repository Citation

Dickens, D. R. (2007). A Small Unassuming Man Walked up to Me, Shook My Hand and Told Me, “I Really Enjoyed Your Paper”. In Dmitri N. Shalin, Bios Sociologicus: The Erving Goffman Archives 1-1.

Available at: https://digitalscholarship.unlv.edu/goffman_archives/16

This Correspondence is protected by copyright and/or related rights. It has been brought to you by Digital Scholarship@UNLV with permission from the rights-holder(s). You are free to use this Correspondence in any way that is permitted by the copyright and related rights legislation that applies to your use. For other uses you need to obtain permission from the rights-holder(s) directly, unless additional rights are indicated by a Creative Commons license in the record and/or on the work itself.

This Correspondence has been accepted for inclusion in Bios Sociologicus: The Erving Goffman Archives by an authorized administrator of Digital Scholarship@UNLV. For more information, please contact digitalscholarship@unlv.edu.

Remembering Erving Goffman

David Dickens:

A Small Unassuming Man Walked up to Me, Shook My Hand and Told Me, "I Really Enjoyed Your Paper"

Dr. David Dickens, Professor of Sociology at the University of Nevada Las Vegas, wrote this memoir at the invitation of Dmitri Shalin and gave his approval for posting the present version in the Erving Goffman Archives.

[Posted 09-12-07]

September 12, 2007

During my last year of graduate school, in 1977 or 1978, I presented a paper on phenomenological sociology at a conference in Boston. The session was chaired by Larry Wieder, a prominent ethnomethodologist. Once the presentations concluded, a small unassuming man walked up to me, shook my hand and told me "I really enjoyed your paper. It was very clear." I thanked him and he then turned toward Larry, whom he seemed to know, and said "Larry, I didn't understand a word you said." Wieder, being the kind fellow that he was, simply chuckled and said, "Well, Erving, I'm sorry to hear that." I still had no idea who the stranger was but, as he turned and walked away, Larry looked at me and said, "you should be very proud, that was Erving Goffman."