FEATURES

12 BRUTALITY IN OUR BONES

Debra Martin, winner of the 2015 Harry Reid Silver State Research Award, uses the remains of the dead to uncover the roots of human violence.

16 CHECKING INTO RESEARCH

Four hospitality researchers, like the industry they study, have put the customer first. In the process, they've uncovered some of the mysteries behind consumer behavior.

22 BRAIN POWER

In 2007, UNLV began building its neuroscience program. Today, those efforts have paid off in the form of research that brings us closer to addressing neurological disorders and diseases.

30 DISRUPTIVE BY DESIGN

An actor. An opera singer. A filmmaker. A photographer. What do they have in common? All embrace the contradictory, using it to define both their work and their artistic identities.

DEPARTMENTS

2 RESEARCH BRIEFS

A new bacterial phylum, battling underage trafficking, a program to boost campus entrepreneurship, digging up the dirt on Mars, fighting HIV in Nigeria, and more.

38 BOOKS

Faculty authors explore intersex diagnoses, national park conservation, college students' impact on American fashion, and what fiction post-9/11 says about our collective psyche.

44 RESEARCH REPORT

An annual accounting of research and economic development productivity over the previous fiscal year.

Xiangning Chen researches genetic links between schizophrenia and smoking. More on his findings on Page 25 of our cover story, "Brain Power."
