Hebrides Suite

Published in 1962, Hebrides Suite by Clare Grundman (1913-1996) is based off of Marjory Kennedy-Fraser’s “Songs of the Hebrides.” A group of islands off of the west coast of Scotland called the Hebrides have inspired numerous writers and composers, including Felix Mendelssohn. Grundman’s suite is comprised of four movements, with the first titled “The Peat-Fire Flame.”

Music from Carmen

George Bizet composed his opera, Carmen in 1875, and premiered at the Opera Comique in Paris. It was not an initial success, but eventually went on to become one of the most popular operas of all time. It has been transformed into versions for theatre, screen, and a version has even been written to be performed on ice. The music of Carmen is used by many, in academia and popular culture, to represent the spirit and flair of Spanish music. The version heard tonight is a medley consisting of three songs from the opera, Habanera, Flower Song, and Toreador Song.

Sleepers Awake!

One of the requirements of Bach’s position as music director of the St. Thomas Church in Leipzig was that he prepared a complete cantata for each church service and all special church holidays. Of these still-surviving, the one bearing the number 140, and entitled Wachet Auf, is still one of the most frequently performed. One of the striking parts of Bach’s setting of this parable is the second chorus, which features the tenor section of the choir singing the choral melody while the orchestra plays an entirely different tune. Bach was so fond of this section that he arranged it for organ some years later. This Wachet Auf! chorus remains one of Bach’s most familiar and best-loved compositions.

The Corcoran Cadets

John Philip Sousa (1854-1932) composed Corcoran Cadets in 1890. Known as his "Eighth-note March," this march was written for the cadet drill team in Washington, DC, which was sponsored by W.W. Corcoran. Conductor Frederick Fennell, editor of this edition of Corcoran Cadets, chose this composition to be the first march performed by the Eastman Wind Ensemble in January of 1953.

Prelude, Siciliano and Rondo

Malcolm Arnold
Arr. John P. Paynter

Prelude, Siciliano and Rondo was originally written for the brass bands for which England is well-known, titled Little Suite for Brass. Each movement is presented in short, clear five-part song forms. The ABACA design gives the imaginative melodies of Malcolm Arnold a natural, almost folk-like setting. The liltingly expressive Siciliano is both slow and expressive, affording solo instruments and smaller choirs of sound to be heard and ends quietly. The rollicking Rondo provides a romping finale in which the technical brilliance of the modern wind band is set forth in boastful brilliance.

The Klaxon

Henry Fillmore
Ed. Fredrick Fennell

The great American love affair with the automobile really began to heat up in the 1920's when the family car drew us all to the roads. An old French word and a new small rectangular building- the garage, became part of life. Long before the phrase "standard equipment," the buyer of a new car had to add items such as a loud horn that worked when needed. As a boy, I remember watching my father add one to an old Buick. Even then I thought that the raucous sound of its name accomplished its commercial purpose: it was called a Klaxon.

Henry Fillmore obviously kept all avenues to the public very wide open and functioning. When his band played at the Cincinnati Automobile Show in January 1930, he seized the opportunity to introduce a new march that was most appropriate to the occasion, The Klaxon. Not content to play a new march named for an automobile horn, Filmore dressed up the performance with another "first," the introduction of a new instrument, the klaxophone, a brace of the noisy devices tuned to play along with the band, presumably in the trio and break strain. -Fredrick Fennel, 1984

The Seventh Symphony's premiere concert was performed to benefit the soldiers wounded a few months earlier in the battle of Hanau. It was one of Beethoven's most successful concerts. The celebratory symphony, dedicated to both Count Moritz von Fries and Russian Empress Elisabeth Alekseev, was performed three times in 10 weeks following its premiere. The second movement of the Seventh often is performed separately from the complete symphony, and might have been one of Beethoven's most popular compositions.

Colorado Peaks

Written in 2005, Colorado Peaks was commissioned by the St. Vrain Valley Honor Band near Denver, Colorado. Written for large concert band, the piece has recurring thematic material throughout. The work, filled with gentle syncopation, simple chromaticism, and timbral variety, is essentially based on two ideas: a crisp quarter-note pulse representative of hiking and the broad reach of the distant mountains first represented in the horns. There is also a tranquil section intended to be introspective, indicative of all hiking journeys as metaphors for, and ultimately about, inward growth. The composer states: "Because the piece was commissioned by an ensemble in Colorado, I wanted the piece to make some reference to the awe-inspiring Colorado Rockies. The work is not, however, a depiction of their majesty. Instead it suggests a person's relation to them via a rugged and persistent climb."

Suite of Old American Dances

Robert Russell Bennett composed the Suite of Old American Dances in 1950. This suite is an original composition for band in which the composer seeks to set the mood of a Saturday night barn dance with all the gaiety which festivity demands, recalling several of the characteristic dances remembered from childhood. Bennett has described the music as "native American dance forms ... treated in a 'riot' of instrumental colors," and the composition is distinguished by superb effectiveness of instrumental writing and facile flow of musical ideas. The dances include: Cake Walk, Schottische, Western One-Step, Wallflower Waltz, and Rag.
Italian Rhapsody

Italian Rhapsody is a collection of Italian folk songs and a few operatic excerpts scored with Italian gusto! Solo Clarinet opens this work with a dramatic flair developing into a devious rendition of "The Italian Wedding Song #2" (The Wedding Tarantella). "Caderna," composed by A.D. Arcangelo, is presented in both an Italian street band and contemporary march style. Giacomo Pucini's La Boheme "Quando m'en vo" (Musetta's Waltz) makes an appearance as an accordion player serenading young lovers in the moonlight. The finale features Luigi Denza's "Funiculi! Funicula!," Giuseppe Verdi's Il Trovatore (Act II - Anvil Chorus) and Gioacchino Rossini's Wabbit of Seville.

The Rakes of Mallow

The Irish Suite, by the dean of American light music, Leroy Anderson is one of the most enduring and endearing works in the repertoire. Drawn from familiar folk tunes, its six movements present a rich musical palette brimming with color and fresh invention.

The original suite, commissioned in 1947 by the Erie Society of Boston, and by all accounts written in less than two weeks time, was comprised of only four movements when Arthur Fielder and the Boston Pops Orchestra premiered it that year. Anderson himself subsequently scored these four movements for concert band, and later added the last two.
