Gambling and the Millennial Generation: A Cultural and Demographic Perspective

Don Feeney

Minnesota State Lottery
The Millennials

• The “Connected” generation
• Born 1982 – 2004
• Also known as
  – Generation Y
  – Generation C
  – Generation Me
  – Generation 9/11
  – Peter Pan Generation
What demography tells us

• They are numerous
• They are diverse
• They’re delaying adulthood

What the culture tells us

• Diversity isn’t an issue
• Formative experiences are different and critical
KEY FORMATIVE EXPERIENCES

• The Great Recession
• 9/11
THEY FACE ECONOMIC UNCERTAINTY

• No expectation of lifetime employment
• April 2016 unemployment rate for 18-29 year olds was 9%
• The average US student loan debt is estimated at $28,000
"I have things I enjoy that are sure bets.”

“What happens if you win $100? Are you going to get the bug that I could win more?”

“I feel guilty spending my money on a long shot.”

AND (POSSIBLY) AS A RESULT DEFER ADULTHOOD
ENTITLEMENT AND BIG EXPECTATIONS
ENTERTAINMENT: IT’S ABOUT THEM
You can ask for a burrito to be wrapped in a cheese quesadilla instead of a normal flour tortilla at Chipotle. THE RESULTS ARE AMAZING!
THEY ARE TECH-SAVVY
THEY ARE TECH-DEPENDENT
“I’m conscious of budgeting, but I don’t want to miss out on something just because of the financial side. It doesn’t really matter to me right now. I can make money later. What’s 10 bucks today?”

–Luke, 22

THEY ARE STRESSED

“I like being by myself, but sometimes I feel like that’s hard to articulate. Like if you don’t want to hang out with people, you always have to have an excuse. You can’t just be like ‘I want to chill out and read.’ I feel like it’s almost not socially acceptable. I know it’s weird.” – Tori, 22

• 24/7 lifestyle can be exhausting
• Nearly half feel their stress level is “very high” or “high”
• Facebook depression → “Instead of connecting, some become more isolated than ever.”
