For the second straight week a major college opponent will attempt to derail the Rebel Express. Tonight's foe is powerful Utah State University, a team which posted an outstanding 9-2 record in 1972.

Both UNLV (3-0) and USU (1-1) have first year coaches ... the Rebels' being Ron Meyer and the Aggies' Phil Krueger ... and both have committed their schools to excellence and need a win here this evening to keep them on that road.

UNLV has rolled over the State College of Arkansas, 38-6, Cal State, Los Angeles, 42-7, and Marshall University, 31-9, enroute to their stringiest team UN LV is off to its best start since 1968 (the first year when UNLV went 8-1) and six goals for the three goals thus far in the second period where the Rebels have put up 25 markers, but the foes have shut out opponents in the fourth quarter with the Rebels' Meyer has established and is trying to reach. Thank you for the entire staff of the UNLV athletic department for being Rebel Rooters ... HOW FUTURE REBEL FOES FARED LAST WEEKEND ...

Headline: LUXURY TRAVEL ROUTE

Golf has become one of the major pastimes in the United States and around the world. Yet, the origins of the game remain somewhat shrouded and arguments still arise among trivia buffs over the beginnings of the sport.

Historians differ on where and when the first man used a crooked stick to hit a small round object toward a fixed goal in an open field. The Dutch, French and the Romans have claimed to be the originators, and even recently the Russians have gotten into the act.

But most students of the game unite on Scotland as the cradle, if not the birthplace of golf. There are documentary records that the game was banned, along with football, by King James II in 1457. The sports, the King believed, ran contrary to the national interests, which was the training of bowmen to defend the country's borders.

So, therefore it was gunpowder that saved the game of golf. Gunpowder made the archer obsolete and the Scots continued to play golf. In 1754, there was formed in Scotland what is now known as the Royal and Ancient Golf Club of St. Andrews. They became the final arbiter of the rules for the game.

The first golf balls were made of stitched leather and filled with feathers. In the middle of the 19th century, the "gutta-percha" ball, made of rubbery material, was introduced and remained the standard until 1900 when two Americans developed a rubber-thread ball that would fly farther and truer than any in use.

Shortly after that refinement, steel-shafted clubs began to replace those that had been made of wood, and the "modern era" of golf began. Since that time only minor changes in equipment have taken place. And until the last three years the dimple configuration and size of the ball have not changed since the 1930's.

1. Who holds the collegiate football record for most passes caught in one season?
2. In 1919 baseball suffered a major scandal. What was it called?
3. In what year did Billie Jean King win her first U. S. tennis title in Forest Hills?
4. In Hockey who is known as the "Rocket"?
5. What NFL team holds the record for most league championships?
6. What horse race offers the largest single purse of any in the world?
7. Who won the first Indianapolis 500 race?
8. The LA Rams have won only one NFL title. Name the year.
9. Who holds baseball's record for the highest batting average in one season?
10. Jack Nicklaus has won the Masters championship four times. What was the first year?

Modern-day football is so technical, you have to have a degree in calculus to figure out the playbook. If you can’t immediately recognize your three options given a certain stimuli, you’ll find yourself sitting on the AstroTurf with the hoofprints of a steamroller gindunga imprinted in your face.

IBM could, and probably will, field an unbeatable team of eleven 250-pound robots before too long if the trend continues.

What ever happened to the guys that ran 70 yards the wrong way with a fumble? Or the emotional cat who jumped off the bench to tackle an opposing runner? How about the fans that would turn out in 15-degree weather to watch their team, which hadn’t won a game in two years?

Also, those days are probably gone for good. Today’s fans won’t turn out in 80-degree weather to watch the World Champions. They’d rather sit home in front of a TV set.

In order to make your modern-day football watching -- whether it be here at the stadium or home in front of the tube -- more enjoyable, you should take time to learn what some of these new, technical football terms really mean:

FOREARM SHIVER -- Unfortunate fan who gets stuck in the refrigerator while making a beer run during a TV time out.

FIVE-YARD DASH -- Heap big can of dog food.

WIDE RECEIVER -- 24-inch color TV.

DOUBLE COVERAGE -- CBS, and NBC bringing the game to you and me.

STUNTING LINEBACKER -- Playful behemoth who fills coach’s street shoes with plastic cement in the locker room.

WEAK-SIDE LINEBACKER -- Stunting linebacker after irate, baseball bat-wielding coach finds him.

COSTLY TURNOVER -- New apple pastry at concession stand, which sells for too cool 60c.

QUICK HITTER -- Muhammad Ali, (BEFORE FRAZIER)

SMELLING PAY DIRT -- Old prospector with nose for gold.

GOOD FIELD POSITION -- Right in between the stands, so 15,000 paying customers will have something to watch.

CUTTING AGAINST THE GRAIN -- What wheat farmers do around harvest time.

READING DEFENSE -- A very pleasurable hobby, especially in big cities where graffiti is a well-developed art form.

UNLV Scene

BY MARK HUGHES
Information Director

There’s a patch of ground at the UNLV campus that should be chained off and dedicated as hallowed turf. It’s the new UNLV athletic field and its playing days are over.

For as long as most folks can remember, this tiny piece of property south of the gymnasium has served as the one central location for all of the university’s physical education and athletic activities. Back in the ’50s, when there were only a few hundred students around, the three-acre site served its purpose admirably. But when the population on campus began to boom, the athletic field, unfortunately, stayed the same size.

Thousands of sweat-shirted students began to stream on and off the field, and the whole place took on the appearance of a carnival.

There were field hockey players scooping their puck around shot putters. Archers politely shot their arrows long enough to let soccer squads pass by. The baseball team started spring practice while modern dancers tip-toed in left field. Plastic golf balls sailed over the heads of the varsity football team. Everyone kept an eye out for the javelin throwers.

And to add to the merry-go-round atmosphere, the entire field was usually encircled with long-distance runners, chugging around a demanding course which required them to dodge obstacles on the ground and in the air.

Two years ago, university administrators went to Carson City with a plan for some new physical education facilities for UNLV. The legislature listened and approved.

Expansive outdoor playing fields, a dozen tennis courts, a handsome baseball diamond and a nine-lane tartan track have already been completed and put to good use. Now, contractors are in the midst of a multi-million dollar assignment which will bring to the campus two new gymnasia, a 50-meter indoor swimming pool, handball courts, weight training areas, classrooms and offices. Completion is set for late next year, and there will be no finer facilities anywhere.

In the meantime, someone should pay a little hommage to the grand old athletic field. For more than a decade, it absorbed the slings, the arrows and the spikes of every known variety of athletic footwear without a single complaint.

A thankless administration will undoubtedly grind it someday into a parking lot.
Every collegiate football coach was, at one time or another, the apple of his parents' eye. Here we have pictures of seven of the nation's leading coaches, taken when they were still knee-high to a linebacker. Can you match the pictures at the top of the page with the more recent ones at the bottom? Make your picks and then compare them with the answers below.
