COVID-19: PAYMENT PROTECTION PROGRAM (PPP) LOAN IMPACT IN THE MOUNTAIN WEST

Economic Development & Workforce Fact Sheet No. 25 | August 2020

Prepared by: Eshaan Vakil, Elia Del Carmen Solano-Patricio, Caitlin J. Saladino, and William E. Brown, Jr.

PURPOSE:

This fact sheet summarizes the impact of COVID-19 relief loans on small businesses in 5 Mountain West states: Arizona, Colorado, Nevada, New Mexico, and Utah. Using data reported by the Small Business Administration’s (SBA) Paycheck Protection Program (PPP),¹ researchers at Brookings report, “across metro areas, COVID-19 relief loans are helping some places more than others.”² This fact sheet explores the geographic distribution of PPP loans in 20 “very large,” “large,” “midsize,” and “small” metropolitan statistical areas (MSA) in the Mountain West.

ABOUT THE DATA:

For each jurisdiction (state and MSA), the data set contains information on the number of employer firms, the number of employees employed by those firms, total loans received, and reported jobs retained (from 2018, for both employer and non-employer firms). A breakdown of MSA size classification is detailed below.

KEY FINDINGS:

1. Firms in New Mexico were significantly less likely to request/receive PPP loans than firms in other states.
2. Firms in Utah were more likely to receive PPP loans than firms in other states. This trend is mirrored in the corresponding data for MSAs, with Provo-Orem, Ogden-Clearfield, and St. George being the leading MSAs in their respective size categories with firms most likely to receive PPP loans.
3. Firms in Arizona MSAs tended to be less likely to receive PPP loans. Standouts included Tucson (a notable outlier in the very large category), Sierra Vista-Douglas, Yuma, and Lake Havasu-Kingman. Two exceptions are Phoenix-Mesa-Chandler and Flagstaff.

DEFINITION OF TERMS:

Small Business	An employer firm with less than 500 employees
Paycheck Protection Program (PPP)	U.S. Congress’s central policy for keeping workers in their jobs amid widespread small business closures due to COVID-19
PPP Coverage	The share of small businesses who received a PPP loan, calculated by dividing the number of loans approved through the program by the total number of small businesses in 2018
Jobs Retained	The interpreting of the Jobs Retained/Employer Job Count figure is a measure of job growth during the COVID-19 pandemic. This number measures jobs retained in 2020 against jobs present in 2018

Table 1 lists PPP loan data for five Mountain West states. While Colorado received the most absolute number of PPP loans, Arizona received the most loans per employer firms (i.e. PPP Coverage for 74% of the state’s firms).

Figure 1 compares the share of firms that received loans to the share of jobs retained in each Mountain West state. Utah had the highest share of PPP coverage and the highest share of jobs-retained, while New Mexico had the lowest share of PPP coverage and jobs retained.

*Adapted from the SBA PPP report and loan level data

Figures 2, 3, 4 and 5 show the PPP loan rate for Mountain West MSAs. Among “very large” Mountain West metros, 59% of Tucson, AZ firms received PPP loans, while 74% of firms in neighboring Phoenix received PPP loans. Among “large” Mountain West metros, 64% of firms in Colorado Spring, CO received PPP loans. Among “midsize metros,” 68% of firms in Reno, NV received PPP loans. Among “small” Mountain West metros, Arizona MSAs experienced a lower rate of PPP coverage than other MSAs of a comparable size.
