BIS seeks presenters for 1994 preconference
ACRL's Bibliographic Instruction Section seeks public services librarians practiced in using active learning techniques in library instruction to participate in the June 24, 1994, preconference, "Integrating Active Learning into Library Instruction: Practical Information for Immediate Use." Four librarians will be selected to demonstrate an active learning technique to groups of 30-35 in 50-minute breakout sessions. Trish Ridgeway, Catholic University, will provide a theoretical perspective in her keynote address.

Applicants should submit an instruction outline and a 30-50-minute videotape of themselves using an active learning technique in library instruction by June 1, 1993. Applications and questions should be directed to: Lynn Klekowski, DePaul University, 25 E. Jackson, 2nd fl., Chicago, IL 60604-2287; voice: (312) 362-8432; fax: (312) 362-8186; Internet: librlink@orion.depaul.edu. Successful candidates will be notified after July 1, 1993.

Internet resources for architecture studies
There are many ways of finding one's way around the Internet. Gopher, Veronica, and WAIS are just some of the search mechanisms currently in place. For the beginner, however, the Internet can be overwhelming in the wealth of its resources and in the multiplicity of its organization.

Several discussions on the Internet have mentioned the subject/discipline approach as a workable method of using the resources of the ever-expanding-still-rather-chaotic Internet. This list focusing on architecture studies includes a variety of resources and destinations: discussion lists and groups, special databases, indexes, and electronic journals. Opacs (except in the context of special databases) and ftp sites have not been included.

These sources were identified in a variety of ways, including the Koval's list of e-journals, postings to lists identifying new lists (DESIGN-L is especially good at this), and information from colleagues—especially those on ARlis-L. Acknowledgment also goes to Kay Tuma, University of Nevada, Las Vegas, Library network trainer, for her many suggestions.

Portions of this list were posted in September 1992 to ARlis-L. Since then some items have been added, some deleted. A list having to do with the Internet must always be considered in process. If readers are aware of sources that could be added to this list, please contact me at jeanneb@nevada.edu.

Special databases
- Arizona State's Solar Energy Index: through Melvyl: telnet melvyl.ucop.edu; or through CARL: telnet pac.carl.org
- Carnegie Mellon's ARCHPICS, an index to architectural illustrations: telnet library.cmu.edu [login:library], change databases
- EPA Online Library, including report bibliographic data: telnet epaibm.rtpnc.epa.gov; select 6, select 1
- Rensselaer Polytechnic's architecture slides database: telnet infotrax.rotary.its.rpi.edu (also available through Melvyl)

Electronic journals
Architronic—the Electronic Journal of Architecture. Send request for subscription to arcitron@kentvm or to arcitron@kentvm.kent.edu with message SUBSCRIBE ARCITRON [first name][last name].

Gopher
Jane Carlink, DAAP librarian at the University of Cincinnati, alerted me to the existence of a neat gopher with text and graphic materials: gopher to North Carolina—NCSU Library gopher—NCSU's Library without Walls—disciplinary—fine arts—Jeanne Broun, architecture studies librarian, University of Nevada, Las Vegas.

Ed. note: CRRL News would like to print additional brief subject lists of Internet resources. If you would like to prepare one contact Mary Ellen Davis, (800) 545-2433 ext. 2511 or E-mail: U38598@uiucvm.uiuc.edu.
