6-24-2018

Finding Their Way: An Information Resource Guide for New Refugees in Southern Nevada

Christina Miskey
University of Nevada, Las Vegas, christina.miskey@unlv.edu

Amanda Nida
College of Western Idaho, amanda.nida@gmail.com

Janelle Youngblood
Hillsboro (OR) Public Library, jmeyoungblood@gmail.com

Follow this and additional works at: https://digitalscholarship.unlv.edu/libfacpresentation

Part of the Library and Information Science Commons

Finding Their Way:
An Information Resource Guide for New Refugees in Southern Nevada

The Project

We recognized an information gap for refugees who didn't yet have ready access to a computer, or weren't yet computer literate, and helped to fill it by creating an information guide to help them navigate their new city

Features

➔ Can be printed or used digitally

➔ Easily translatable into other languages

➔ The template can also be easily updated as needed

➔ Can aid refugees from a variety of countries

Key Collaborators

Types of Information Included

Scalability

➔ The design template can be adapted by cities of all shapes and sizes

➔ Doesn't require specialized software/equipment for user or organization

Benefits for Libraries and Refugee Orgs

➔ Libraries already represent a free information resource service in communities

➔ Refugees frequently sign up for library cards as part of resettlement services

➔ Opportunity for both libraries and refugee organizations to share their resources to provide education and services for new arrivals

Christina Miskey | University of Nevada, Las Vegas
Amanda Nida | College of Western Idaho
Janelle Youngblood | Hillsboro (OR) Public Library

Catholic Charities
of Southern Nevada

Information School
UNIVERSITY of WASHINGTON