Joe Williams

With the sole exception of Billie Holiday, possibly no other singer could convey both ballads and blues with such authority and appeal. Joe Williams' rich baritone voice, clear diction, masterly interpretation of lyrics, and tremendous stage presence brought him international fame. The early part of his 60+ year career found him with the bands of such jazz luminaries as Jimmie Noone, Coleman Hawkins, Andy Kirk, and Lionel Hampton. He came first to broad public attention in 1955 with his hit version of Memphis Slim's "Every Day I Have The Blues," recorded with the Count Basie Orchestra. That famous LP (now CD) entitled "Count Basie Swings, Joe Williams Sings" established Joe as a major performer, and also put the Basie band firmly back in the public eye (and ear) after a period of postwar retrenchment.

Joe remained the Basie Orchestra's star singer until 1961, when he left to go out on his own. As a solo artist, backed usually by a piano trio or quartet, Joe performed for almost forty years in top jazz clubs and concert halls around the world. Joe Williams performed in concert and on record with such stars as Ella Fitzgerald, Sarah Vaughan, George Shearing, Nancy Wilson, Marlena Shaw, Mel Torme, and with celebrated blues shouters Jimmy Rushing and Big Joe Turner. He appeared frequently on national TV programs such as the "Tonight Show with Johnny Carson," the "Perry Como Show," and had a supporting role in the Bill Cosby comedies.

He won a multitude of awards, including a Grammy in 1985 for his recording "Nothing But The Blues," and was given the E.L.L.A Award by the Society of Singers. He was also invited to perform in the White House by Presidents Nixon and Clinton. In 1983, a pavement star was laid for him in Hollywood's 'Walk Of The Stars' -- next to that of Count Basie.

Before he died -- at the age of 80 on March 29, 1999 -- Joe Williams, with his wife Jilleen and some of his closest friends and collaborators, created the not-for-profit Joe Williams Every Day Foundation. The Foundation's purpose is fourfold:

- To support the musical arts by promoting music in all its facets, jazz in particular.
- To support programs that address the needs of students and those starting careers in music, giving special emphasis to training above the secondary level. This includes singing, instrument training, composition and arranging, and first promotional recordings.
- To support selected organizations recommended by schools, colleges, and charitable bodies involved in music, the performing arts, and music education.
- To promote jazz by documenting the histories, musical knowledge and experiences of leading musicians in the jazz field arts, and music education.

UNLV Jazz Ensemble

Since its inception nearly four decades ago, the UNLV Jazz Ensemble has received outstanding reviews from critics, including a five-star rating from Downbeat Magazine. UNLV Jazz Ensemble I garnered coveted Downbeat Magazine Student Music Awards for Graduate College Large Ensemble Outstanding Performance in 2010 and 2013. This exceptional group was one of three university jazz bands selected from distinguished music programs worldwide and Nevada's first collegiate instrumental ensemble invited to participate in the prestigious 65th annual Midwest Clinic and International Band and Orchestra Conference, in Chicago, IL.

With 20 critically acclaimed recordings to its credit, the UNLV Jazz Ensemble traveled internationally including numerous trips to Europe, Africa, Japan, South America, Australia, and performed at The Monterey Next Generation Jazz Festival, The Hawaii International Jazz Festival, The Kennedy Center For The Performing Arts in Washington, DC, The Village Vanguard in New York City, The University of Idaho Lionel Hampton Jazz Festival, and The Jazz Bakery in Los Angeles. Students from the UNLV Jazz Ensemble received numerous outstanding soloist awards at major festivals including the Reno Jazz Festival and the Monterey Next Generation Jazz Festival and played with The Count Basie Orchestra in concert directed by UNLV alumni Dennis Mackrel.

In addition, students in the UNLV Jazz Ensemble won significant jazz composition and arranging accolades from Downbeat Magazine and ASCAP. The UNLV Jazz Ensemble has performed or recorded with many legendary jazz artists including Bobby Shew, Bob Sheppard, George Garzone, Chris Potter, Tim Hagans, Peter Erskine, James Moody, Phil Woods, Harvey Mason, Ron Carter, Kenny Burrell, Clay Jenkins, Rich Perry, Wayne Bergeron, Marlena Shaw, Monty Alexander, Marvin Stamm, Joe LaBarbera, Brandon Fields, Eric Marienthal, Ruth Brown, Joe Williams, Don Menza, and Manhattan Transfer.

Students from the UNLV Jazz Ensemble performed with Academy and Tony Award-winning entertainers including Ben Vereen, Bebe Neuwirth, Marvin Hamlisch, Tommy Tune, the cast of Forbidden Broadway and Jekyll and Hyde for the UNLV Performing Arts Center concert series. Alumni from the UNLV Jazz Ensemble appeared in concerts with artists including Frank Sinatra, John Scofield, The Dizzy Gillespie All Stars, Santana, Steve Winwood, Jackson Brown, Celine Dion, Bette Midler and the Count Basie Orchestra.
