

5-1-2013

Always Away

Mollie Bergeron

University of Nevada, Las Vegas

Follow this and additional works at: <https://digitalscholarship.unlv.edu/thesesdissertations>

Part of the Poetry Commons

Repository Citation

Bergeron, Mollie, "Always Away" (2013). UNLV Theses, Dissertations, Professional Papers, and Capstones. 1802.

<http://dx.doi.org/10.34917/4478196>

This Thesis is protected by copyright and/or related rights. It has been brought to you by Digital Scholarship@UNLV with permission from the rights-holder(s). You are free to use this Thesis in any way that is permitted by the copyright and related rights legislation that applies to your use. For other uses you need to obtain permission from the rights-holder(s) directly, unless additional rights are indicated by a Creative Commons license in the record and/or on the work itself.

This Thesis has been accepted for inclusion in UNLV Theses, Dissertations, Professional Papers, and Capstones by an authorized administrator of Digital Scholarship@UNLV. For more information, please contact digitalscholarship@unlv.edu.

ALWAYS AWAY

By

Mollie Rae Bergeron

Bachelor of Arts in English Language and Literature University of Rhode Island 2009

A thesis submitted in partial fulfillment of the requirements for the

Master of Fine Arts in Creative Writing

Department of English
College of Liberal Arts
The Graduate College

University of Nevada, Las Vegas
May 2013

Copyright by Mollie Bergeron, 2013

All Rights Reserved

THE GRADUATE COLLEGE

We recommend the thesis prepared under our supervision by

Mollie Rae Bergeron

entitled

Always Away

be accepted in partial fulfillment of the requirements for the degree of

Master of Fine Arts in Creative Writing
Department of English

Claudia Keelan, M.F.A., Committee Chair

Donald Revell, Ph.D., Committee Member

Richard Wiley, M.F.A., Committee Member

Giuseppe Natale, Ph.D., Graduate College Representative

Tom Piechota, Ph.D., Interim Vice President for Research &
Dean of the Graduate College

May 2013

ABSTRACT

Always Away

By

Mollie Rae Bergeron

Prof. Claudia Keelan, Examination Chair
Professor of English and Creative Writing
University of Nevada, Las Vegas

At any given time, there are pages of notes and thoughts running through our minds; these have to come out in some way. In order to stay sane, to stay human, I write poems. These poems are interested in breath and space, memory and nostalgia, loss and water. Each of these ideas has its own fit as part of the poem as well as part of life and being alive. Human emotion is varied through these. Observation and perception, turned into poems through the very physical act of putting words onto a page, allow these memories and experiences to live on as physical relics. My poems are always working with space—of the page and location. The space afforded to each line, each word, is deliberate and crucial; the pauses created by the whitespace deliver the breath of the line and the weight each line necessitates. My poems were begging to breathe—they needed to be freed from the invisible box that seemed to be containing them. This allowed my writing to be more honest to the experience being conveyed.

My time spent abroad in Barcelona as part of my degree requirement for this program was an experience that not just allowed, but forced me to be more conscious in my writing. I heard English nowhere except for the page. The poems produced during and after those months (“Barcelona Tableaux”) are not an exact, detailed record of my experience, but are rather a breath into the memory of my experience. Poetry retains the dead in the beauty of the undead. Nothing can be brought back, not exactly, but we recognize and remember or imagine, so the people and places of the past—things that have been lost—are never truly gone. They live on in poems, where they can be returned to time and time again.

Of course, poetry is constantly dealing with life and death. Because a poem is a recording of the poet's experience, however abstractly, it must be in conversation with humanity, with what it means to be human. My poems are grappling with life and death in terms of space and loss. The whitespace on the page is, in addition to breath, absence. The title of this manuscript, "Always Away," stems from a realization that indeed I have always been far away whenever a loved one has died, but further, it thinks about the gaps between experience, memory, and what finally gets translated to the page. These, too, are human experiences that are, to me, simply fascinating. The failure of memory, which often leads to nostalgia, leaves us with beatific images of our past, and also causes us to pause—to breathe—while recalling or retelling the event.

The poems in this thesis are always struggling to find the truth of the experience. They want to breathe and to feel alive. When the poems are read aloud, the whitespace forces the reader to take these breaths with the line of the poem, to feel the music in the life of the language.

TABLE OF CONTENTS

ABSTRACT.....	iii
RECURRING SPACES
Downtown.....	2
Alone by the Shore.....	3
Late January.....	4
Charlie.....	5
Teacher.....	6
June.....	7
Newport.....	8
Pawtuxet in an Olive Green Room.....	9
After Rhode Island.....	10
WRITING HER
Resistance.....	13
Anima Rising.....	15
Multiplicity.....	16
War of the Raven.....	17
We the Labyrinth.....	18
On Speech.....	19
The Platform.....	20
Tradition in Existence.....	22
Broken Letter to the Flower.....	24
The Flower's Response.....	26
WITHOUT MY OCEAN
Imploding Star.....	28
Underfoot.....	29
Maundy Thursday.....	30
The War.....	31
Recorded Selves.....	32
El.....	33
Savoir.....	34
Swings.....	35
Aeternam.....	36
Dusk.....	37
Mojave Sunrise.....	38
LV.....	39
Shadow.....	40
This is Morning.....	41
Eternal.....	42
Flight.....	43
Immutable.....	44

BARCELONA TABLEAUX
[the old woman diagonal (who waters plants)].....	46
[night rolled thunderclouds in with chilled thermostats].....	48
[drifts through the sound distorted electric].....	49
[windy sunflowers on iron clad buiding sides face away from light].....	50
[each clear-cut manzana (illa) (block)].....	51
[thick city heat presses in on lungs &].....	52
[sun rises over Casa Mila]	53
[the floor of the outdoor room in the castle].....	54
[surreal vision absolute perfection of art in structure].....	56
[conversely the sharp lines @ Avinguda Diagonal].....	57
[when I close my eyes I am still walking those streets].....	58
[the hole & absence today as odd as ystrdy or six years ago].....	59
[travel in thought more jarring than the physical nature].....	60
[near l'Eixample where the street widens].....	61
[xchange mountains for mountains].....	62
[under these stars the same stars].....	63
[Night brings a cool starlight breeze].....	64
VITA.....	66

RECURRING SPACES

Downtown

the absence of lilac trees and cherry blossoms—that reading last April when Darcie took petals from her black peacoat pockets and threw them all over the room the listeners they were just too beautiful the petals clung the cement sidewalks outside near where Broadway meets Westminster the cleansing scent of the bruised pink petals the rain dropped and feet stepped as the air warmed and the snow melted down into the sewers friends sat in a flat grassy park in the sun with a guitar and a frisbee phones at home —fresh & invigorating as the damp dirt wakens dogwood next then daffodils bright yellow patches planted on the hill next to my house with roses tulips rhododendron really all shades of health in the high trees, telling Ursula—someday, you'll die here

Alone by the Shore

birds dispersed into one sea one particle among them—my song & their chirps—calm

I'll join the ocean soon

I sing the waves a lullaby about does and lambs I sing to starfish and urchins how they die
 how they'll miss their bodies

Late January

a Christmas tree stops saltwater from exploding frozen the ice on the hill & it slides back inside to come out through toes & footsteps

pounding down the snow and the pavement—no it didn't happen something about the tree dead needing to come down ice melts into rivers overflowing & shutting down highway & state flooding the bank whole towns rowboats tied to doorsteps cars buried in wet streets like oceans encase houses emptied of breath

Charlie

I was not supposed to remember a green-flavored lollipop from the bank down the street closed after the new money machine a grape lollipop and a man with no cheek—I was scared & hid under the dining room table there was nowhere to kiss him curious about socks messy rooms & bumpyskinned I was three didn't know what Charlie was

I forgot he had an accident & stopped asking for kisses goodbye

June

icy needles of cold early ocean water meet the area fresh between arm and torso quick slice

body acclimates

after waiting

in the desert

waterless

crashing silence dive under & escape overhead pull thousands of pounds of water salt dust and fish swirled into gray translucence the sun that desert element meeting me here amidst endless miles of wet

Newport

she was a penguin for a minute—tottering down cracked cobblestone sidewalks oversized overcoat stopping icy ocean mid-June breeze see the bridge there to the left & glowing through fogged breath windows open once inside the red car half-asleep & sideways backseat spitting up words in no particular order standing in the sea for the first time never having known the ocean the cold sweat of the water hear it lapping against the wall all and concrete rush of night sand through toes sticking even when we try to brush it off

Pawtuxet in an Olive Green Room

I forgot what I paid to see—

John says there is no forgetting the dog is panting in the door he wants nothing attention the same reason John wore those shirts it's all now before the start of a couldn't be no guitar sway now, the crackling leaves in his cigarettes all ceiling fans bring me there thick wool

wrapped in his navy blue discount sweater apple-scented candles are masking the smoke holding my eyes and eagerness—here, for now all of the things that John was and wasn't the revolutionary v-neck

After Rhode Island

there is no ocean

angry at you for eating the fat on meat taking my bedroom door off the hinges at me for not saying regoodbye not taking you seriously loss is a wave becoming thunderclouds you are a wave a wave pushes off itself which is nothing which is water how would you help if you were here with you nowhere and I still how am I brave

did you cry when you died I saw you cry—saying merde de bull in a church

I don't want to be a rock ever

I can't replace you

I miss sea glass, heart shaped rocks, rain the stale scent of your room when the garage became too cluttered where were you when you made the dollhouse?

come back

come home and I will buy you a beer a pack of Marlboros a book a powertool they've stopped calling me to ask for you blue denim shirt, flannel lining, now a war-teddy bear—bookshelf collapsed, the button-up now on my floor and you might be angry it is un-fixable I wasn't there

WRITING HER

Resistance

swallowed myself you meaning these waves the ebullient immersed in the dark self-disdain hasn't been surprised hasn't accused a funny desire to bring out sick she resists death and you write! for your body take why before the age of twenty-seven too great great men little secret you punished yourself—you didn't go all the way irresistibly in secret attenuate the edge off as we come we forgiven or to forget

let no imbecilic capitalist publishing relayers imperatives by an economy not yourself smug-faced texts sexed texts write woman and man an oblique man his masculinity & femininity will concern us women from without health witches from their childhood men make them forget eternal rest girls and bodies intact frigidified seething an effort for the sex cops display of forces for centuries in the trembling equilibrium

returning in circles in deadly brainwashing slow them down with apartheid routine they begin to speak you are Africa your dark is afraid don't fall into the forest we internalized this horror the greatest crime against their own enemies immense strength against the executants women an antinarcissism!

loves to be loved for infamous logic

Anima Rising

the dead figure the nasty companion —inhibitions & speech body immense unconscious spring will spread values of the old game decensored woman womanly access to goods bodily territories tear away the structure occupied for the guilty —for having desires & not enough by emancipation marvelous self urgently learn without body a good fighter is reduced to his shadow the false woman preventing the live one from breathing the whole woman the occasion to her shattering entry based on her weapon every symbolic system is time to start oral language the torment of getting up to speak entirely lost for language

daring transgression to speak distress words fall upon the deaf in language women will confirm a place the symbolic out of the snare the domain the harem

throw trembling body let go into voice with her body the intractable have speech

(never generalized into history) the common logic of logic bound by calculating mastery lip service plus the mask

Multiplicity

there is another that affects the living cloth of an adolescent-mother yes absolute assent unknown transfiguration astonishes us all & then resorts to a shell of this kingdom beyond experience its heart makes the voice & complicated truth another woman man not myself

this doubt thinks it is all infinite possibilities as another single self and boring peoples accomplish the ballast the weight the memory the delicate joy is that (creature) the most wonderful pluck of being not the other & this boundary is performed within this time I am always trembling not quite clumsily in secret love to be exact absolute inexchangeability located together wished in a dark experience we were afraid of never coming back—this dangerous desire to go to be transfigured

War of the Raven

any kind of raven those the woman will ceremoniously touch any female must wait form a poetic of what is allowed—inventory species that I watched for a long time birds hated where I honor & cherish the noblest traveler upon language willingly reached by the ladder of danger joyfully people know each thing gradually —including the opposite of those people these birds have something one wishes to give he didn't demand & experienced an offence love & we feel unclean, tau[gh]t disgust a universe appearance so raw and humble

On Speech

speak about what it will do & bring women away as violently as the law same fatal goal

put into the world into movement the future must not deny the past—still I refuse & repeat them irremovability of destiny to confuse is imperative reflections on the point during the new breaks (la nouvelle de l'ancien) no grounds for arid millennial sides & two aims: foresee the project write as a woman against conventional man a woman who senses history the enormity of the dark as time no typical infinite richness constitutions can't talk about a uniform any more than music writing phantasms incredible

I amazed more by a description of a world she secretly haunts since early childhood

a searching of knowledge a systematic bodily function passionate practice inventive masturbation accompanied by each stage of rapture inscribing something beautiful forbidden write this unique empire unacknowledged sovereigns my desires have invented new desires my body knows luminous torrents in frames & didn't open my mouth

The Platform

nothing is itself a struggle with itself two sprigs and joy—the thing that escapes all ether

I do not understand misogyny the eagle depths the things they can't swallow there is no memory who invented hate on bastions of Bibles those apocalyptic criminal kings the loyal adulterous women with everything unjust amidst criminal heroes which slipped the miniscule garden loving couples doomed to strangers abominable to a world without visas deviations return to our continents and fierce hatred as human say[s] hatred books are the miracles of millennia inestimable being of strengths equally mysterious loving a little flame in the darkness while sleeps massacres watchers of the cause without waiting love the other they cut their tongue in two in the forest of closing and ejecting gentlemen among men—it's war women are not among the dead with the children that history shared equally responding to curses men in infancy already giving and speaking unjust glory in endless mourning by accident a space in disease (misogyny) wherever it's there in public whirl

the uneasiness death drives doesn't enclose REincarnation—the hopes of the living to one's self these agents increase in undecided fate no longer formidable laid bare to nobody & always very striking a totally alien image to keep its face always with consciousness separation complete there's absence for one the space is ready without particularity for the outer skin inside it waits for the assassin a combination any preoccupation couldn't take place & mistrust cannot wait to heave a fabricated shame a simulacrum cannot last passion is mute invocation into the night & what happens next return to the body more confiscated from the uncanny stranger

Broken Letter to the Flower

love that's the one before the influence that began & flees she flies to the arbor breaking the flowers & the bench hope brought to the running it's the one who stands up the only long time between them estrangement not made for happiness marriage up close would be from afar a bench of the isolating the running the running for a long time from the end of time the german comes into view one letter far & departed much involves the letter two seated between time zones it's familiar time frames inspiration is the soul... waiting eyes now nights scorching sleep at some foreign hour the mountain searches every country to translate black blood born to dance at spring time unlivable side by side it's necessary to be struck beyond the letter slumbering to set fire

the force we obey strange joy that lament is real the blind embrace faith they separate horses to appease a dream to love the ancient stranger lacking in unexpected Egypt we read high of destinies finished

characters think they'll make night to get lost on looking tearing blurs of years

triumphant timorous betrothals already always one meter granted the cradle still a low back of breaths when kingdoms smile at the staggered going just words but no story enter an instant flight east away from eternal fasting of angels

The Flower's Response

we miss the tide & the letter the limit

you everything, nothing yes everything

gave us absence that impatiently we return a childless time that did not axe the story our eyes glazed a story our torment is mortal horror we adore

fierceness love & the adversary defeated in French the wall we like in books in the garden can't be crime careful, it comes with poison plunged in a single mouth (writing) their separation its truth it's dark only such darkness till the dark part

WITHOUT MY OCEAN

Imploding Star

when the world was held up by the roof of my mouth the globe was not solid was not of importance I slept in the silence of that warm cavity—I knew

I am a star galaxy a universe

I see out through the capsule (that is the glass) & I see in to all encompassed which is to say all the roof of my mouth is a pillow that holds strangers' heads they dream & I am their dream I am that stranger in the dream we walk on the beach and learn about ourselves

Underfoot

even Walt Whitman would not like your grass overwatered and unnatural sprinklers drop on sidewalk and tree bark the beautiful uncut hair of graves grandpa's soul tells me new dandelions you beautiful weed appear everywhere in the frozen spring (I pull you out by your toes and hear your silent scream or shrill in terrified delight painless)

myself only when with myself self some other when accompanied by dandelions empty grass sand

Maundy Thursday

she ran across the field of dead grass I across the water because I was thirsty

I'm not surprised or shocked or sad

& it was Thursday & I never wish I were someone or something different

I never miss her face his scent
the way they acted together

The War

destruction of the creative flame—heat in its white glow dim blue base sprouts melts the cupboards and crashes the plates through a skylight bursts a new flicker & the roof is gone clothes all eaten

the beautiful mushroom cloud as it spreads its silent pain juuuuajjjjjjm brilliance of a human mind tragic in pure form—intangible though physical, visible c'est magnifique mais ce n'est pas la guerre

EI

jukebox—broken extinct—the bottom of a cobble stone hill in Thessaloniki lyrics cycle foreignness—

(the strangers perfect) the eleventh stop downtown under a slow rotation is all I am sure of

Savoir

I know

it is fast & no longer understand why long-forgotten complications it doesn't affect me or the flowers we pay no mind

the rotation is beautiful

& the flowers turn up their faces to the sun

Swings

old wood swing replaced by tire swing

(both homemade)—ropes replaced by chains the rope broke only bruises

grassless yard before the playground stump-seat to pick daffodils bluebonnets

I sat here and watched as the sandbox was built the tree branch where the swing was—cut down for sunlight—itself a swing for its final act sending a man through the sky as it fell

*

swing set made of metal four children

feel it pull away from ground (no-gravity belly)

see-saw horse screeches back and forth waits to be righted

*

jungle gym castlelike wooden and looming splinters sand below and afraid to fall

Aeternam

Ah, Ti Pousse, avec votre triste, triste histoire...
Qui suis-j' à pleurer?
Et vous aviez raison, et ça me rende malade—Égoïste, tellement foutu égoïste.

Et tu, Papa, tu es un ange maintenant.
Tu n'as pas de cercueil plus.
Tu ne plaisantes pas.

Je veux savoir ce que tu pensé dernier.
L'église partout. La nôtre est la maison des morts.

Vous aussi, Ti Pousse, Ti Jean, vous êtes morts aussi.
Enterré quelque part dans l'Est. Ainsi soit-il.

*

Aeternam

Oh, Little Thumb, with your sad, sad story...
Who am I to cry?
And you were right, and it sickens me—Selfish, so fucking selfish.

And you, Dad, you're an angel now.
You have no coffin anymore.
You're not joking.

I want to know what you were thinking last.
The everywhere church. Ours is the house of the dead.

You too, Little Thumb, Little Jean, you're dead as well.
Buried somewhere in the East. And so it is.

Dusk

cinnamon houses dead brown dirt feet and aalii scrape at tephra beneath carmine walls as red rolls in birds bomb their belltones over flat yellow sand quiet choirs of stampeding mice furrow alongside joshua distant song petals sing softly lowering sun into the hill brilliant fireside

cicadas welcome the cold moon invites stars burn faster

invites the stars to shorten their lives for the enjoyment of the birds the mice

Mojave Sunrise

on top of the burnt corner green skies reflect and the colors reverse and the colors reverse orange

yellow

encapsulated by fog—

the delicate choking as air traps in open space sky that escapes drifts away fog chasing after fog

plush

soothing sky stop

don't move

and the colors reverse and the colors reverse

smooth & submerged

stifling white

all colors inside

sierra charred and calmed

LV

this city built on lights & love or something in desert under no-rain skies

Joshua everywhere

holding up casino walls

Joshua open stars with tireless arms

let me bring you some water Joshua you might be thirsty

Joshua your stoic & spindly gaze arrests all your lovers

Joshua
Joshua
Joshua

all I can do is catch & hold your steady silence

Shadow

desert heat

storms lighting streaks across skies dark & clear there is soup waiting a warm blanket and air conditioning—crickets their hiding places in stuccoed houses asbestosed buildings slippery concrete—well oiled for dry days without this wet opening clouds & not clouds splitting trees to dump the rain inside dead damp rings of rotted age young leaves fall & the old leaves fall in crowded overflowing drainstops

This Is Morning

the earth is spins beneath my pounding feet each step pushes me further above the rotation breaths come sharply in and out pain sets in and I look up mountains and the sun rising a poppy-colored sunrise over desert rock

I think this isn't so bad

I keep going

keep pushing the ground behind me and head away from the valley toward sand and the silence stoic beauty of a new high-rise

Eternal

throw away the skies

for something else

stronger or darker

my secrets held in imploding bits dust & stars

the country does not matter which ocean

all same under all stars

I've thrown away many skies each spectacular & unexemplary under this sky

I wish for another never finding a better blue than this never finding a sky

where nothing has changed each place

sky star

has watched the others

& grown accordingly

Flight

without my ocean
I found my legs

a new way a feather floating west or east

traversing winds purposely & aimlessly each breath

a new direction

where is your bird?

I am the bird & its missing tuft

my wings are less powerful than the breeze I travel on w/ brothers & sisters

this is our way

if I fly on the breeze
I can never fall

Immutable

there silence was fine

I enjoyed the lack of expectancy this silence now forced words unheard & so unspoken

entertainment unnecessary

my streets too wide & still overpopulated the man on the corner wants my change wants me to hear his story

I want to pay him for his words

I understand & wish he could know trees are blooming & it is no different

BARCELONA TABLEAUX

//

the old woman diagonal (who waters plants)
waves hello every day <hola> and goes inside with a smile

Whippets or Greyhounds walk leashless down Passeig de Gràcia I can't tell the difference their skeletal frames elegant sickly

one white dog / one spotted dog trots between streets—across Carrer de Sant Joaquim the birds pay no mind & thunder down toward the open apartment windows and doors in the morning I wake to a pigeon on the balcony railing soon joined by another to fly away in the crowd the man walking down the left side of the street is now a woman I don't know the difference between individuals —strangers all each Spaniard a familiar face except for my waiters I know by voice and face you are kind and serve me lunch some days you teach me words in Spanish & bring me wine I tip you extravagantly a blue bike rides away from me up this is not an orange or red—the rental—bike this is his own a new traveler struggles with her suitcases they fall over and every few steps she stops to pick up the yellow bag the construction is back where the dogs were the workers take trash out of the bags and place it carefully on the ground the building is where people live & it is boarded up they must tear down the fence each time they come and go the workers put it back each day this is how the work continues on my waiters are kind & are happy with their lives their smiles and the lilt of their <hola>s and <gràcies>/<gracias>s those are what make it clear there was a cat on another balcony not the balcony of the pigeon it is gone the old woman with the smile has not appeared for days except to water her plants at night with bottled water

//

windy sunflowers on iron clad building sides face away from the light there is a rooftop garden where tomatoes and peppers grow it is out of reach & I stare at it, next to the roses that cover a window with green shutters and fall toward the street reaching for strangers with their pink and white petals a few fall on two men below, unloading a van of bags that look like garbage they are moving in to the apartment above the roses they do not look foreign next to the roses, a couch hung dangerously over a balcony a stressful half hour of watching a family move their furniture into the building the couch was brown leather the kindness of these elderly is unfathomable each says hello and smiles as if he were your own grandfather they laugh with the children who are playing it is understood the future is all there is the past was fought for their Catalan laughter so they could play soccer against the Generalitat doors against the clocktower near any flat surface

//

thick city heat presses in on lungs & the man confident—white-shirt swagger through the sun a thick black afro cars beep incessantly driving back and back down the street down the off-main travelspace it is monday

shops close people come out everyone walks drives their cars their motos the construction (months long) is stopped men sit and eat in the shade the buildings across the street smoke their cigarettes talk about FCB's last big win sit & sip lemonade on the balcony dream up lives

woman walking in cable-knit sweater looks so sad she may be of thousands of unemployed (under 25 // 50%) pigeons know to turn as they bomb down the street one last straggler nearly forgets this is how they get through the summer heat this is how we spend our afternoons

//

sun rises over Casa Mila
alone walk to the center of La Rambla de Catalunya near Diagonal the tourists locals sit & watch the people transplants

mingled over café o cervesa before work midday they come in hordes complaining about the sun not minding the sun strapped down shopping bags from El Corte Inglés

I cannot afford these & buy tasses from Starbucks instead I try to buy a dress & forget & fail when O visits we see Barri Gòtic walk for hours & are ever in awe the beauty

//

the floor of the outdoor room in the castle
—where we fell & danced on our backs & our toes fell off we hold the trees and watch as the birds chirp at the sunrise through the open sky roof

I step outside without shoes & look down on the city I want to walk home there is no sense in finding a cab at this hour this daylight with cool morning sun you and I begin walking downhill with hundreds of strangers pulled up a hill and up more steps by further strangers the ones who brought us here at the start the one who caused our toes to fall off and our shoes to break in half he was not on the dancefloor inside or outside Poble Español his green bag and his friends outside upside and up the dirt and the stairs until we stopped and turned breath taken by the full city view in the dawn sun streaming on our benches over and next to the castle the brick or stone we were there and are we don't know that morning we strangers were awake for thirty-five hours the few up the hill and the stairs became more became frightening

we had no shoes

when we left we walked down miles of steps through miles of subway and up more steps and down to the trains we lost our feet for a view of the sprawling city in the morning we started on the floor falling and staying down holding the tree and a neck

I did not know we were outside the birds came in

I forgot it was a castle until the sun until we got lost and found another way

//

conversely the sharp lines @ Avinguda Diagonal triangular building connecting w/ Còrsega stark contrast also breathtaking in the cool morning light I stroll this street to Basílica de la Puríssima Concepció back to The Daily Telegraph where I drink Pilsner Urquell & eat free popcorn another night I return with friends and we have imported American cervesas they are cheaper here than at home from their hotel rooftop we can see a panorama of the city the highs and lows ongoing construction of La Sagrada Família towering high above the rest already we make a plot to return every ten years & believe it will happen

//

the hole & absence today as odd as ystrdy or six years ago

I see the missing pieces in bits around the world or city in a cup of black coffee (no sugar) here and there it is and swirls a headdance confusing misery and ecstasy (¡esta sí!)

for a moment I see a musician and picture another one with a mustache and deep scratchy belly-laugh hear another voice singing playing another guitar then it's gone and the same musician is there the nose stays the same and the crinkle around the eye corners a strange conflation of one and one these things happen sometimes it is overwhelming

//

near l'Eixample where the street widens I buy bread daily (€0.44) & wine (Antaño @ €1.95/bottle) the man who sells me wine asks me the same things every day <<¿d'on ets?

& ¿quin és el seu segon llengua?>> always I answer brokenly in the wrong languages

<<Estados Unis & no segonda... hablas anglais?>>

he tells me of his children & I understand more each day he speaks no Spanish or English they do & are away the man smiles and speaks as though I understand

I like this I feel welcomed & unappreciative unlearned

I try & he knows this we become friends in my mind my Catalan wineseller my best friend

we end each day

¿borsa?

no gràcies. moltes gràcies per tot. adéu.

//

xchange the mountains for mountains sand for snow and cold that cracks the knuckles a place that feels like a place to breathe deeply and happily the world comes together in a single street corner where the bar/bistro/café leads us back to the sea

I watch the pigeons flutter purposefully and coo sounding like baby owls they shit on my car and I don't have a hose to wash it off I'd like to get rid of the car some days

I'd like a place where my mother will visit / a place she does not hate by default there is too much orange there is not enough blue we are out of balance here

//

Night brings a cool starlight breeze
sea's breaking waves out of earshot, I drink and watch Estrellas on my balcony endless drifting peoples underfoot—moving.
I think of dad. I think of loss and lighthouses —I sit back and try to see that in the stars

They seem to blink at me, the stars... light drifting toward me as on a breeze the ships roll in on waves, aided by the lighthouses.
I call to the ships, hoping they are within earshot they need to stay; they need to stop moving I think this at the captain from my balcony.

Up here on this second- (third-) floor balcony it seems I am closer than ever to the stars.
I watch their gases swirling and feel I am moving closer to them, pushed along by the breeze I'm drifting away from this city, out of earshot of the people below, of the lighthouses.

From up here, I can see all of the lighthouses from my New England coast to my Spanish balcony.
The stars are now all here, within earshot.
I watch them, but am reminded of the stars atop the lighthouses, and the sea breeze on my skin as I would watch the light moving...

when there was fog, they were always moving, the guides and protectants of ships—lighthouses standing tall and strong against the salty breeze.
(I taste the salt on my lips even here, on this balcony.) Ships moving quickly over the waves beneath the stars —deckhands falling victim to the sirens in earshot—the mermaid-like sirens, catching those within earshot finding their way to ships lost and not, those that are moving swiftly and deftly beneath the sky, guided by stars guided by the voices of sirens, guided by lighthouses.

I hold my breath and wish the best for the ships from my balcony, I hold my breath and lean into the Mediterranean breeze.

I feel home here, feeling this breeze... so I sit and I smile, alone on this old, metal balcony, remembering the safety I've known from the lighthouses.

VITA

Graduate College
University of Nevada, Las Vegas

Mollie Rae Bergeron

EDUCATION

M.F.A. in Creative Writing (Poetry, English Dept.)
University of Nevada, Las Vegas—Expected May 2013

Thesis Title: Always Away

Thesis Examination Committee:

Committee Chairperson, Claudia Keelan, M.F.A.
Committee Member, Donald Revell, Ph.D.
Committee Member, Richard Wiley, M.F.A.
Graduate Faculty Representative, Giuseppe Natale, Ph.D.

B.A. in English
University of Rhode Island—December 2009

Physics Major—2006 – 2007
Boston University

HONORS AND AFFILIATIONS

Graduated Summa Cum Laude, URI
Rhode Island Honor Society
National Honor Society
Phi Eta Sigma
Golden Key International Honour Society
Phi Beta Kappa
National Society of Collegiate Scholars

TEACHING EXPERIENCE

Graduate Teaching Assistant University of Nevada, Las Vegas, August 2010 – present

English 101—Composition I (Fall 2010, Spring 2011)
English 102—Composition II (Fall 2011 – Fall 2012)
Writing Tutor (Fall 2010, Spring 2013)

EDITORIAL EXPERIENCE

Interim Magazine

Managing Editor

August 2012 – present

Interim Magazine

Assistant Poetry Editor

August 2011 – August 2012

Barrow Street Journal & Barrow Street Press

Editorial Intern

January 2009 – July 2010

Newport Review

Editorial Intern

January 2009 – July 2010

The Independent Scribe

Layout Editor, Poetry Reader

January 2008 – December 2009