2-2011

Promoting professionalism in master’s level teachers through research based writing

Jesus Garcia
University of Nevada, Las Vegas, jesus.garcia@unlv.edu

P. S. McMillen
University of Nevada, Las Vegas, psmcmillen.phd@gmail.com

David A. Bolin
Western High School, Las Vegas

Follow this and additional works at: https://digitalscholarship.unlv.edu/libfacpresentation

Part of the Curriculum and Instruction Commons, Educational Assessment, Evaluation, and Research Commons, Scholarly Communication Commons, Scholarly Publishing Commons, and the Teacher Education and Professional Development Commons

Repository Citation

Available at: https://digitalscholarship.unlv.edu/libfacpresentation/66

This Presentation is brought to you for free and open access by the Library Faculty/Staff Scholarship & Research at Digital Scholarship@UNLV. It has been accepted for inclusion in Library Faculty Presentations by an authorized administrator of Digital Scholarship@UNLV. For more information, please contact digitalscholarship@unlv.edu.
Promoting Professionalism in Master’s Level Teachers through Research Based Writing

International Society for the Social Studies: Orlando, FL 2011
University of Nevada, Las Vegas
Jesus Garcia, Paula S. McMillen, and David A. Bolin
Starting Points

• Social Studies Professor
• Librarian
• Public School Teacher
Course Description

• 2 research-based papers suitable for publication
  – Step by step process
  – Writing “buddy”
  – Frequent instructor feedback

• Guest speakers (educator writers)
Rationale for the Convergence

• Re-emphasize the inquiry process in social studies pedagogy
• Build research skills & knowledge (tools and strategies)
• Counteract the effects of teacher socialization
Evolution of students

- “Re-understanding” the writing process (intrinsic value of the process- vs. product-based approach)
- Sense of self-efficacy as researchers
- Connecting practices and policies in education to research
- Self-evaluation of teaching practices
- Complexity of issues
- Increased professionalism
An Individual’s Story

• Going through the motions, why more?
  – Professionalism
  – Gain credibility with
  – Respectful treatment
  – Challenge administrative policies with research evidence
Areas for Improvement

• Capitalize on peer-to-peer coaching
• Increase utilization of library faculty
  – more integration in class
  – establish connections with school librarians
• Greater connection of writing projects to real-world issues
  – Target specific writing audiences
• Sustaining student momentum after completion of course/program
  – Create support or advisory groups
Implications for Teacher Education Programs

- Increase writing requirements at earlier stages of Master’s programs
- Increase connections between research and practice
  - Why am I doing what I’m doing in my classroom?
  - Build in robust discussion opportunities throughout Master’s program
Questions?

• To read the full article, utilize the doi resolver: http://dx.doi.org/ and enter: doi:10.1016/j.acalib.2010.06.007